Unmatched 360° panoramic view over more than 200 mountain peaks.

The Schilthorn of the Jungfrau region offers pure mountain magic. Not only film stars get their money's worth at this former shooting location for a James Bond movie: Holders of a Swiss Travel Pass enjoy the ride up to Schilthorn free of charge.

Even the ride up the mountain is impressive: From Interlaken by train to Lauterbrunnen and onwards by bus, guests travel to the Stechelberg lower terminal in the Lauterbrunnental Valley. Then, passengers glide towards the Schilthorn in panoramic cabins, passing sheer rock faces and roaring waterfalls on the way. The arrival at the summit reveals a stunning panoramic view of the high Alpine mountain world, including the UNESCO World Heritage site with Eiger, Mönch and Jungfrau. The Schilthorn is perfect for day trips or half-day trips.

History

Early on, the impressive Schilthorn summit was a well-known destination among mountaineers. As a result, the vision to make the Schilthorn accessible also to non-mountaineers emerged. However, the mountain's geological realities presented formidable challenges to engineers. Thus, it was not until the 1960s that cableway technology had advanced far enough to allow the opening up of the Schilthorn to a wider public.

On 12 June 1967, the time had finally arrived for the Schilthorn Railway to enter into operation. There were not enough funds, however, to complete the summit station. Here is where the most famous of all secret agents comes in: James Bond.

The producers of the movie "On her Majesty's Secret Service" were looking for a shooting location higher than 3,000 meters a.s.l. accessible only by cableway. The Schilthorn Railway and the production company came to the following agreement: The Schilthorn Railway would make the location available and the producers would pay for the completion of the summit building. The filmmakers were free to style the interior of the revolving restaurant according to their needs. Thanks to the solid and durable construction methods, many features have survived to this day and look exactly the way they did back then.
